Louisa Dale v. Henry Hayes and Thomas Hayes, Louisa Helden v. Henry Hayes. The defendants in these cases were boys of the age of seven and a half years respectively, and were brought before the Court in custody of the police of the city of St. Louis, previously arrested to appear in answer to the summons issued against them. All the parties live at Balmain. It was held that the boys were of an unruly and mischievous character, they were wont to throw stones at Eliza Dale, and that a little girl named Clara, who was likewise constantly maltreated and terrified not only by her own brothers but by the boys in the neighbourhood, Louisa Helden assaulted by Henry Hayes, who threw stones at her.

he went to the help of the other complainant. The judge turned to the clerk that the father of the boys engaged their disgraced conduct. In the first case the boys were fined $40, each, with costs of Court, or, in the second of the fine not being paid, to be imprisoned one day; in the second the delinquent was fined in a further sum of $40, with costs of Court &c, the alternative of payment being twenty-four hours' incarceration. The other cases on the summons sheet were postponed till Friday week.

FRIDAY, JUNE 30.
OVER his Honor District-Judge CARY.
John Hendron, James Mc(Ginley, Michael King, Thomas Gibbs, Thomas Mages, and Alexander Butts were charged with being in a dwelling-house and putting the inmates under a deadly fear. The Crown Prosecutor having opened the case called Constable Miller, who deposed to having taken three of the prisoners into custody. Accused.—Accompanied Thomas Mages

the night of the 1st May at the Pipekey; witness told the charge for which he was apprehended; & he refused me with him, and offered £50 to let him go.

Mr. Lee: Did not search McGinley, and did not know he had been on him; and was not in uniform.

Witness: Detestable Scoundrel. Remembered going to the Pipekey on the 30th April last with constable Cantlin; they Croy on the road, who returned with them to his public-house; when they got there heard a great noise inside the house; Croy went into a house opposite, as was told to go into a house opposite to the house of Hamilton King; McGinley asked what brought him there; witness he came on duty. McGinley said if they fetched the troopers in Muldoon Croy should not stop there; and stood at the door, and told them to go away; away," heard a person say outside that they would the house down if Cryd did not come out; Mrs. Cryd out of her bedroom, and said she would give up charge the house to him; there were about thirty or forty persons about the house; Magee saw some of them and did not know how they got there; he had some wine, Mrs. Cryd came out and gave him drink; he said he would pay for it, but he did not do so; there were about ten who said would not leave; heard no threats against Mrs. Cryd; Mr. Lee: They were not very violent on the occasion; did not get into any quarrel; he was not drunk, but a drunken spree; did not say he had seen Magee those night [witness was here shown the deposition, in which

C. Grey depicted. Lived at the Pipeway; knew the former Hendon, remembered him coming to his house the 27th April; he went to bed, and was woke up by four or four men in the house; Hendon was one of them; served him with some drink and requested them to leave the house, but they refused; he then went out to get some help and a fight ensued, and put him out, and the next day saw Hendon next day; went into the house being full of people, and saw Magee, who he would kick his guts out; thought the best thing he could do was to get out, which he did; Magee said that he wanted to get out, and remained away all Saturday night, and went back on the next day with the police; he was a great noise in the house; there were only two or three of the police with him, and being afraid to go home he went to a store opposite.

"Mr. Lee," said he, "I would not go out that night to play with Maggie, because he did not think he should get play."

Abner Cry dropped. Remembered some man coming to the bar on the night of Saturday, the 26th of April; and had been there since that time. He had been there, and he knew the prisoners at the bar; heard Henderson tell her husband "You had the best of me to-night," and he heard a rash across the bar, and she called out to her husband to get into the bedroom; they got over the bar and he saw the man do it. He tried to prevent the getting in while her husband was getting out of the door; the two men who rushed the bar and struck her not among the prisoners; the man ordered her to give him some drink, which she did; the fight continued; she was outside and saw a bus was outside; she was outside and found it was not him, she then went back out the lights; hearing a noise, she looked and began trying to get into the bedroom; in doing so, he lay on the dressing table, which was empty; she then opened the front door and called out; a man was in her bedroom; there was a table containing £25 in notes, gold, silver, and jewellery; she was certain that it was there when she got in; she found the table was turned over but the money was not there; the next day

Magpie said, "I'll come," they told her to get some dinner and drink, and need some bad expressions; she told them she could cook; they told her they would put her on the fire; they were Magpie and Mc-Ginley; they helped themselves to her money; and Magpie said "You have got some—money," and insisted upon having it, threatening her if she did not; she gave him all she had, which was about ten shillings and shillings; better said he would have some brandy to drink from her a bottle, which turned out to be empty; she put it back, and took a bottle of brandy; this was before
